

A House That Slowly Vanished

Note: This is the second in a series of reminiscences about Daly City's yesterdays.

By GEORGE KIRCHHUBEL

As Told to Frank LaPierre

The spur track that runs parallel with Junipero Serra Boulevard in Daly City had become a nest of hobos.

Every boxcar parked on the siding was occupied and all a passerby could see were long johns (underwear) waving in the breeze from clotheslines.

There was the smoke of cookfires rising in the air, and the smell of Mulligan stews cooking over fires.

Suddenly, a Southern Pacific Railroad Co. switch engine came along and hooked onto the first box car. The long line of boxcars that had been overlooked by SP for months was rediscovered.

It was a most peculiar sight to see the long underwear, and all those other newly-washed items of personal clothing flapping as the boxcars were pulled from the area.

Strangely enough, Joe "Pop" Brown didn't lose anything in the great train pullout. He was the luckiest man I ever knew.

George Rehaune was a man I would say was in his forties when all this occurred. He owned a little shack that stood on stilts, not unlike some of the other homes in the low lying areas of Daly City.

It was furnished with all the necessities of life and it had plumbing.

George had decided to enter the "Pyle Bunion Derby."

The Pyle Bunion Derby was a hike that started in San Francisco and was supposed to end in New York City.

Somehow, Pop Brown had heard about this foot race and he approached Rehaune with an idea.

"George, I heard you're going to walk to New York," Pop stated, matter-of-factly. "Now, George, you know the minute you leave, some kids will be around and they'll see your house is empty and they'll probably break all your windows.

"I Remember"

"If you want, I'll live in your house and take care of it while you're on that hike," Pop offered.

Rehaune agreed.

As it turned out, Rehaune was one of the few who completed the trip.

When he got to New York City he wrote Pop that he had met some friends from Germany and he would stay on the East Coast for the winter.

It so happens that that particular winter turned out to be a cold one for Daly City.

One day as I was walking a string of greyhounds (racing dogs) I happened to pass by the house Pop was living in for Rehaune.

I stopped as I observed Pop working.

Pop was tearing down the back porch of Rehaune's house and I asked him what the matter was.

"What is it, Joe? Termites?" I asked.

"What in hell are termites?" Pop responded.

"Termites are little bugs that get in the wood and destroy it."

"Why you stupid ninny. Can't you see I'm getting firewood?"

I reminded Pop that just down the street was a whole park full of trees that he could cut up for firewood.

"I should go all the way down the street when I got all the firewood I need right here?" Pop answered.

I shrugged and walked off.

As I daily passed by the house during that long cold winter, I watched as Pop gradually chopped down the porch.

Next came the siding.

Then the studs and, when the bedroom had disappeared into the stove, it was the furniture's turn.

When the house had no more wood left, Pop sold the stove and curled up beneath the front stairs of the house — all that was left.

Pop had an old greyhound dog to snuggle up to and keep him warm.

Spring came to Daly City and so did Rehaune, looking for his house.

He was speechless when all he found were the front steps and an otherwise vacant lot.

Two more men wanted in connection with the execution-style slaying of a Daly City man, and the wounding of two others, inside a Westlake apartment last week were apprehended in San Francisco Monday.

Daly City detectives Jim Barron, Jim Mendiara, Tom Martin and Bob Voght nabbed the pair after five days of intense investigation.

Armed with 12 gauge shotguns, the detectives first swooped down on Alexander Marion Carr, 28, about 10:30 a.m. Monday as he left a Mission District flat in the 200 block of Dolores Avenue in San Francisco.

The team of investigators had been staking out a pickup truck owned by Carr which was parked near the apartment, it was learned.

After arresting Carr, detectives returned to their posts and waited.

About 1:30 p.m., Frank Fitzgerald, 39, left the same apartment and entered a waiting taxicab.

Police closed in on the cab several blocks away and arrested Fitzgerald.

Earliest Towns, 27, of 40 Cashmere Street, San Francisco, purportedly a counselor in Mayor Moscone's Youth Program in that city, had been arrested earlier in connection with the slaying of Jerry Ray Wade, 26, on Tuesday, March 8.

Wade was gunned down inside his Forest Grove drive apartment as he lay tied hand and foot, and after he was tortured for about an hour with a small knife, the Post learned.

His girlfriend, Barbara Ann Dickson, 30, was also shot in the head, along with Dickson's cousin, David D. Twine, 29, of San Francisco.

A yet-to-be-released consultant's report leans toward the controversial Edgemar School property in Pacifica as the most economically desirable site for a garbage transfer station.

This is despite the fact the Pacifica City Council has publicly stated it would vote against such a measure.

Wayne Trewitt, partner in Easley-Brassey engineering Co. of San Francisco, discussed the site selection findings at a recent meeting of ALERT — a group of Edgemar neighborhood residents opposed to the transfer station being built in their midst.

Daly City hired Trewitt's company to conduct an economic study of nine possible transfer station sites in the Daly City-Pacifica area.

In all, some 42 alternatives on where, and how much it would cost to operate and build such a facility, were studied.

The meeting between Trewitt and ALERT was for by the City of Pacifica.

This payment was in addition to the total $7,000 cost paid by Pacifica and Daly City to conduct the feasibility study.

It had been reported earlier that Trewitt's findings gave the now-vacant 10-acre Edgemar site a first priority for the transfer station, and Mussel Rock Dump site in Daly City a second priority.

Trewitt said this was "simply not true."

"We are looking at pennies per ton on all the sites. This could throw (the selection of a site) either way," Trewitt told The Times.

Ten Eye Teamsters

Ten South San Francisco teachers are beginning a campaign to abandon the California Teachers Association and affiliate with Teamsters Union Local 656, the nation's largest independent labor organization.

If the swing to the Teamsters is successful, the South San Francisco Unified School District will be the first in the county, and possibly the Bay Area, to have teachers represented by the union.

Ron Rovetta, spokesman for the 10 teachers who have formed a committee, said the Teamsters have 30 years of collective bargaining experience — something that unions now representing teachers do not.

This is the first year of collective bargaining for California's public school districts.

Collective bargaining laws would require that the CTA first be decertified as the representative of the district's 500 teachers. This would be accomplished by acquiring the signatures of at least 30 per cent of the teachers. Then an election would be held within the district between CTA and the Teamsters.

However, Rovetta pointed out that the CTA just signed a two-year contract with the district effective through June 30, 1979.

State collective bargaining laws would not allow decertification petitions to be filed until 120 days before the expiration of the present contract.

The Teamsters will

More than 100 persons sipped champagne and coffee and munched cake and sandwiches as Daly City's surfaces in Redwood City Tuesday, with a judge promising to make a decision after reviewing the evidence.

the good work of Tony Giannona."

Teglia presented plaques to Giannona and to Victor G. Kyriakis, both former mayors.

Teglia, who lives with his wife, Verna, at a Garibaldi Street residence, said he considers redevelopment and rehabilitation of housing two of the most important issues facing the council in the upcoming year.

New mayor pro tempore Schumacher added the subjects of water and general planning to his list of priorities for the year ahead.

Schumacher, a 39-year-old attorney who practices in Daly City, is a native of San Francisco. He is a former Daly City police sergeant and assistant district attorney. He also has served as chairman of the Jefferson Elementary District Governing Board.

A number of the residents at the meeting said they were supporters of Teglia, who was elected to the council last year.

Conversely, Deputy District Attorney Michael McCracken contended that regional housing requirements need not be considered by the board.

But even if such a legal requirement, the board indeed did consider the need for housing, McCracken said.

The attorney further argued that the case shouldn't be in court at all because it is a legislative decision not subject to judicial challenge.

Ellman disagreed.

The supervisors last March approved development for some portions of San Bruno Mountain, but disapproved the 5,420 housing units planned for the so-called "Saddle" portion of the mountain.

Welfare: Trust In People Said Key to Fraud

By GEORGE GOLDING

"The flaw in the welfare system is that you've got to trust people."

Over the years, says the cynical welfare worker, she has seen the taxpayers "ripped off" time after time by people willing to lie.

Some of those rip-offs, she says, have been perfectly legal, resulting from loopholes in a system that seems to encourage some people to linger on the welfare rolls, or return again and again.

Others, she says, have been fraudulent, provable and reported. Still others have been fraudulent, but unprovable because rights of privacy must be respected and because there is never enough staff to investigate all the claims.

There is an even greater flaw in the system, however, and that is that we are uncertain what it is for. Taxpayers often complain that everyone on welfare is a lazy leech and that welfare program directors dispense huge sums of money without making sure people need it.

There are enough welfare programs to indicate that a great many of us do need help, and often.

Help is given for alcoholism, physical disabilities, drug abuse, child support, medical service, heroin detoxification, mental health counseling, crisis counseling, vocation guidance, venereal disease, public health, nutrition, environmental health. The list goes on.

Services are extended to many people. Feelings about "welfare" are varied.

People whose children are receiving psychiatric guidance at the county's Mental Health offices often strongly object to the welfare concept, according to staffers there.

One Peninsula junior executive admitted he had been fed and clothed by welfare for years, during the "Great Depression" of the 30's when he was a child.

He did not want to talk about the experience, claiming his family felt degraded and shamed. Yet when his child developed serious behavior problems in school, he had no other choice than to submit to the questioning of welfare department interviewers.

He simply did not make enough money to afford long-range psychiatric help at "outside" prices.

"We were the first family in our county to go on food stamps back in 1939," he said, "and they put my mother and father's picture in the paper receiving the stamps."

"I've never forgotten that, and I swore I'd never go on welfare. But here I am."

For another Peninsula, a young woman with three children by three fathers, welfare is a way of life. As long as she can remember, her family has been on and off welfare, in this county, in Santa Clara, in Los Angeles.

Her mother was on welfare, and her sister. And her first husband, and his mother.

When she arrives in town, broke as always, she heads for the welfare office, knowing what to ask for, how to ask, and knowing that her hungry kids will immediately qualify her for welfare assistance.

She always gets it.

To an elderly Peninsula woman, welfare help is something she had accepted, and done without, several times during her long years.

She used to be bothered by the prying questions of welfare workers, she says, but no more.

"It doesn't matter. I'm 75, and nothing matters any more."

She is partially supported by her distant family, partially helped by social security, partially helped by welfare. She admits that sometimes she gets financial help that is not reported.

"What's an old woman to do?" she asks. "If I get a gift of $20 in a letter from my son, do you think I'm going to report it and have $20 taken off my welfare check?"

"Besides, it isn't the money. What I need most of all is Medi-Cal."

Another Peninsula woman, a North County mother of four, will take advantage of welfare's generosity every time she can.

A few years ago when her house burned she willingly declared her husband among the missing, so she and her children could receive cash contributions.

Her husband stayed with friends a few days until the welfare worker's visits had ended. Then he moved into the apartment the county had rented for the disaster-stricken mother.

Chances are, he figured, he would never get caught.

As chances were, however, he did.

He was sentenced to 90 days in County Jail. He had been there before so that was no great shakes. And while he was jailed, his family legitimately qualified for welfare.

That's the kind of family the cynical welfare worker was talking about when she said some people "rip off" the county.

She said there are others, however, who drift on and off welfare simply because they are unable to break out of the system.

"The difference between 'making it,' and not making it, for people just above the poverty level," she said, "is very small."

carry on an information campaign for the next year, Rovetta said.

Teachers have already received leaflets pointing out that the Teamsters represent San Francisco school administrators, nurses, public health chemists and professional engineers.

"To some of you, being a Teamster is associated with driving a truck," the leaflet stated.

Rovetta was a member of the Certificated Employee Council — the teachers' negotiating team — for five years under the Winton Act, the earlier laws governing school district negotiations.

He was chairman of the team when the teachers went on strike in 1975. The committee, he said, represents a cross-section of the teachers in the district, including some who are not affiliated with any union.

Rovetta said dissatisfaction with CTA has been developing over the past couple of years, but particularly under collective bargaining.

"We started noticing that the negotiations appeared to be bogging down and there wasn't a great deal of assistance coming from CTA," Rovetta said.

"I felt that the weakest part of CTA was the lack of service of the teachers," he added.

Under collective bargaining, he said, teachers need professional negotiators.

Rovetta said representatives of the Teamsters Union met with the committee recently and outlined the kinds of services the union could provide.

He said that Teamsters officials would write up the teachers' contract proposal for negotiations after receiving input from the teachers at proposal meetings.

The CTA expects teachers to do much of the work in writing a contract, he said. The state headquarters provides local unions with a master contract and the local CTA representatives adopt the parts that fit their needs.

The Teamsters would write the contract on the basis of 30 years of experience on what goes into a collective bargaining contract," Rovetta stated. "The CTA doesn't have much experience in this yet."

Then, Rovetta said, professional negotiators from the Teamsters would represent the teachers at the bargaining table. Unlike the CTA's procedures, teachers would not have to be present at the table every day, often missing classes or meeting until late hours on school nights.

"They (the Teamsters) consider teachers the professionals of the education business," Rovetta said. "Their job is in the classroom. Teamsters are the professionals in the negotiating business. Their job is to negotiate."

The two together produce a package that's beneficial to everyone," Rovetta explained.

Teamster officials also said that two staff representatives would visit employees at their schools once a week, "another big switch," Rovetta noted.

Union dues, at current rates, would actually be $1 less for members leaving the CTA and affiliating with the Teamsters, Rovetta said.

SSFCTA President John Heron said he believes the CTA has provided the teachers with qualified negotiators at the bargaining table.

"This most recent attempt on the part of a group of teachers in South San Francisco to bring in said.

CTA, an affiliate of the National Education Association, does not carry a magic wand to solve every problem that occurs, but it never gives up. Heron said.

Baring the recent three-day marathon negotiating session, the CTA team had professional negotiators participating all the time. he said.

"I don't believe Teams-

K-Mart Rezoning Decision Delayed

The Colma City Council has delayed action on a controversial request for a rezoning to allow construction of a K-Mart Store on El Camino Real.

Robert H. Cornell, Colma city attorney, told the council Wednesday night that the state clearinghouse has requested additional time to study the proposal. He said he believes that CalTrans, the highway department, made the request for more study. In addition, Cornell noted that more information from the developer has been given to the city for study, and he recommended the delay.

Council members continued the rezoning request until the April 13 meeting. The rezoning has been requested by Michigan developer E. N. Maisel for a 10-acre site adjacent to Pacific Nurseries. He wants to build a K-Mart Store with a 600-car parking lot.

Opponents of the request claim the proposed K-Mart would be detrimental to the numerous cemetery businesses located on El Camino Real since inception of the Town of Colma. Colma reorganized its council.

Eugene Danielus was unanimously elected mayor, while Paul Howe was unanimously chosen as vice-mayor.

Danielus, a 46-year-old teamster, has been a council member four years, serving as vice-mayor during the past year. He has been a Colma resident 16 years.

Howe was elected a council member last year. He is a 51-year-old superintendent at Cypress Lawn Cemetery. He has lived in the city 18 years.

In other business, the council:

• Agreed to pay Pacific Gas and Electric Co. $33,000 as its share of a $83,000 cost for undergrounding utilities on a short stretch of Serramonte Boulevard.

• Agreed to consider raising dog license fees by

$1, as requested by the San Mateo County Humane Society.

• Approved a use permit to Orowheat Foods to use a warehouse on F Street for storage of foods, provided that vans be kept inside the warehouse and large trucks use Hillside Boulevard for access.

The True Story of The Easter Chicken

nce upon a time, not really too long ago, in the friendly little City of San Bruno, California, the Easter Chicken set out to make his annual delivery of Easter baskets to all the good little boys and girls. While merrily clucking his way along, he saw a very strange sight. "Who are you?" asked the Easter Chicken. "What do you mean I... I'm the Easter Bunny, everyone knows that." "Nonsense," replied the Easter Chicken, "there's no such thing as an Easter Bunny." "Well, who ever heard of the Easter Chicken?" said the Easter Bunny with a smirk, "that's the silliest thing I've ever heard." They argued back and forth for quite some time until it was decided that the Easter title would go to the winner of a race planned for that following Sunday. The day of the race finally came. All the townspeople came out to watch... great cheers arose as the Easter Bunny strolled up to the starting line... only a few cheers rose when the Easter Chicken took his place next to the Bunny. On your mark, get set, GO!!! The race was under way. Now, the Easter Chicken, determined to win to show everyone he was king, started at a slow pace not to tire himself too fast. But, the Easter Bunny was so fast that soon the Easter Chicken was out of sight. As the Bunny turned on to El Camino Real, he stopped dead in his tracks. And there it was, in the center of everything, the Tanforan Park Shopping Center. He looked behind and still saw no trace of the Easter Chicken, so he made a detour to take a closer look at this

"new" shopping center. Once inside, the Bunny was awed at the babbling brooks, trees, and the beautiful interior. The shops were of such a variety that he didn't need to go anywhere else to do his family's shopping... he could do it all right there.

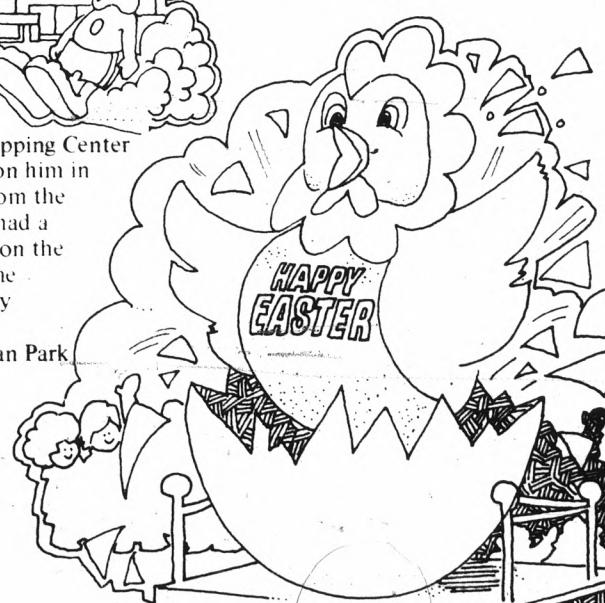

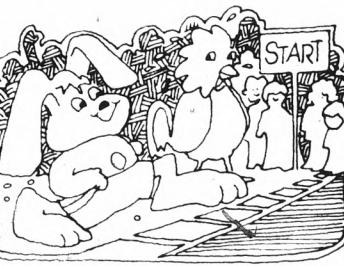

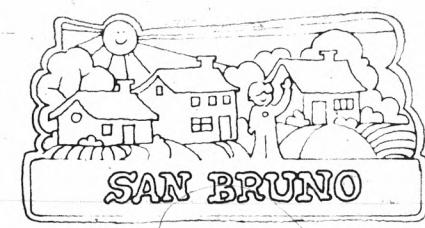

Little did the Bunny know, that while he was fully enjoying himself at Tanforan Park Shopping Center

The Easter Chicken had gotten such a lead on him in the race that he was only a stone's throw from the finish line when the Bunny realized he still had a race to run. Needless to say, the Chicken won the race and the title of Easter, crowning him the Easter Chicken. But the Bunny wasn't really a loser. He may have lost the title of Easter Bunny, but the super values he got at Tanforan Park Shopping Center made him feel like a king.

LIVE... ON THE MALL!

BEGINS 12 NOON, THURSDAY, MARCH 17

The one and only "Easter Chicken" will be in Tanforan's Central Mall, 12 Noon 'til closing every day 'til April 9th. Bring the kids to meet the "Easter Chicken" and have their picture taken with our happy bird.

Wise Advice on Job Hunting

Linking people with jobs has become a major concern of our beloved United States.

To assist in the task a wonderful document has been produced.

The "Occupational Outlook Handbook," 1976-77 edition begins with the following sage advice to a generation of high school and college students who face a seven per cent unemployment rate in the United States.

"Young persons who do not get good preparation for work will find the going more difficult in the years ahead. Employers will be more likely to hire workers who have at least a high school diploma. Furthermore, present experience shows that the less education and training a worker has, the less chance he has for a steady job."

To counteract the argument that college graduates are walking the streets looking for work the book says, "According to the most recently available data, men who had college degrees could expect to earn about $760,000 in their lifetimes or nearly three times the $280,000 likely to be earned by workers who had less than eight years of schooling, nearly twice the amount earned by workers who had one to three years of high school; and more than one-and-a-half times as much as high school graduates."

"Young people who have acquired skills and a good basic education will have a better chance for interesting work, good wages and steady employment. Getting as much education and training as one's abilities and circumstances permit should, therefore, be a top priority for today's youth."

Surely this advice from people who spend their whole time analyzing the job picture in the United States should be reassuring to young people in college and high school.

Samuel Chandler

school. However, a careful look at the "Occupational Outlook Handbook" reveals a few facts that people who are concerned with their present and future employment should study.

For example, the sections of the Handbook that deal with teaching occupations warn that in these fields, workers will face "a competitive employment situation" as well as "possible budget restraints for educational services that might limit expansion."

In the professions connected with the life sciences, the job opportunities for persons with advanced degrees should be favorable through the mid-1980s. Indeed, the demand for biochemists and soil scientists is expected to grow faster than the average for all occupations during the 1980s.

The demand for clerical workers is expected to increase faster than the average for all occupations through the mid-1980s. However, the Handbook warns that, "As more firms use computers and business machines, routine clerical jobs such as payroll, bank and file clerks may be reduced or eliminated. However, as work is shifted from clerks to machines, many jobs will be created for clerical workers who are familiar with computer operations, particularly in large firms."

The demand for industrial skills is not expected to grow. The number of openings, however, may fluctuate from year to year, for American industry is sensitive to changes in the economy.

Overall employment in the health field is expected to grow much faster than the average for all occupations through the mid-1980s. The demand for most social service occupations is expected to increase while the employment of transportation, communications and public utilities workers is expected to grow at about the same rate as the average for all industries through the mid-1980s.

The "Occupational Outlook Handbook" contains 775 pages that are loaded with information. For this reason, it is one of the best sources of vocational guidance information ever published. It is a product of the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the United States Department of Labor.

Californians are fortunate to have access to the publications of the California Employment Development Department. Especially useful to San Mateo County people are the publications of the Northern California office.

One of the publications is entitled "San Mateo Labor Supply and Demand;" the current issue covers January-March 1977. As in the "Occupational Outlook Handbook," the San Mateo publication is arranged by occupation. With each entry, there is an analysis of the opportunities for employment during the period covered.

Consulting such publications saves people much time and disappointment.

Redi-Wheels Ready For Handicapped

By JOHN CURRY

Many long months of work on the San Mateo County Transit District's Redi-Wheels program culminated Tuesday in the first passengers boarding the specially equipped SamTrans buses in three county areas designated for the pilot project.

And so it was with some pride that officials of SamTrans and Community Transit Services, Inc., the contractor, staged a press preview of the service Thursday at the Easter Seal Society Rehabilitation Center in Burlingame.

Wheelchair-bound John (Jack) Smith of Belmont, assisted by his wife Joan and the bus driver, was lifted aboard the 20-passenger bus on a hydraulically operated lift platform, pronouncing it "a hell of a good idea."

A drive up the hill to an Easter Seal Society worker's home at Murchison and Valencia drives in Millbrae demonstrated the hill-climbing abilities of the bus. This is one of eight so equipped taken over from the former Pacifica city system when it was absorbed into SamTrans last summer. These also are the only buses SamTrans now has equipped to handle the mobility impaired.

Smith disembarked, again with the help of wife and driver, posed for more photos, and was lifted back aboard.

Marketing Director Jim Gallagher said it has been shown that it takes about six minutes to take a person in a wheelchair on or off the bus. He said this was considered good time.

Back at the Easter Seal center, a small group of Redi-Wheels drivers was undergoing a week of "emphathy training."

There are special techniques for leading a blind person or helping an elderly or crippled person onto a bus, CTS Vice President John N. Siersema explained. Those who need help with the 14-inch step onto the bus or with navigating on the bus will get it, he indicated.

Included in the training is a day of "role-playing" with the young, healthy students taking turns entering and leaving the bus blindfolded or in wheelchairs, their faces reflecting a sobering experience.

Some 4,000 information kits have been sent to mobility impaired people in San Mateo County. As of Thursday, 75 to 100 affirmative replies had been received, Gallagher said.

Redi-Wheels is for necessary transportation for most types of mobility impairment. The service can be used for medical appointments, social service office visits, shopping, and educational and recreational destinations within the service districts in north, central and south county.

One major requirement is that since this is door-to-door service, riders must call at least 24 hours ahead of time so the buses can be scheduled. Prospective riders also must send in applications specifying their impairments and certified by a physician or other authority.

Applications are available from the SamTrans office, 400 S. El Camino Real, San Mateo 94402.

Tuneup for State Tourney

Skyline downs All-Stars

By PAUL SALVONI
Correspondent

In a dull community college basketball game, the chief virtue of which was the fact that it ended, host Skyline outran a team of Coast Conference All-Stars Saturday night, 90-83.

For a while Skyline, which departs soon for the state playoffs which begin Friday at Selland Arena in Fresno, wasn't too excited about this annual hybrid affair. But the Trojans slowly pulled ahead.

Trailing 80-64, the All-Stars mounted a rally that narrowed the gap to 83-77 when Hartnell center Dave Brown scored on a three-point play with 3:13 remaining.

After an exchange of baskets, the All-Stars had a chance to cut Skyline's edge to four, but got whistled for a walking violation with 1:53 left. Trojan center Mark Felix then hit an outside jump shot, snared a defensive rebound and passed to guard Ted Scott for a breakaway. Scott was fouled and hit the free throw, his three-point play making it 89-80 with 1:04 left.

"At first, I guess we weren't really up for this game," said Scott. "But once we started falling behind (the Stars led 21-14 before Skyline ran off nine straight points to take the lead (for good). I think we pulled together. We wanted to win — you never want to lose."

"I wanted everyone to get a chance to play, and I didn't put too much emphasis on winning this one."

And thanks to the fact that Skyline got its fast break, press and zone defense in full gear after its sluggish start, the Trojans didn't lose. Scott hit 16 points, forward Jerry McNeil 14 and forward Joe Adams 13 as the champs made 39 of 75 shots (52 percent) and outrebounded the Stars 41-39.

"I wanted everyone to get a chance to play, and I didn't put too much emphasis on winning this one."

MT. SAN JACINTO (31-1) probably ranks as the tournament favorite.

"Our overall record (25-5) isn't as good," said Newcomer, "but we played some very tough teams during the practice season (including two games against then-to-be Santa Rosa), and I think that pays off when the playoffs come around."

Butte, the team Skyline meets in the first round of the state playoff tournament Friday at 3:00 p.m., likes to run and plays zone defense — just like Skyline.

Butte (22-4) has a little more height than we do," said Newcomer. "But we may have a little more quickness."

SSF Girls Lose in Overtime

By SIMI LEE
Correspondent

SANTA CLARA — South San Francisco High's girls' basketball team missed 12 free throws in the last quarter and overtime period and eventually lost a consolation match with Santa Cruz, 50-44, in the Central Coast Section play-offs last Saturday night at Buchser High.

Senior Kim Rickman finished her SSF career by pacing the Warrior scoring with 17 points. The 6-0 center dominated the boards with 12 rebounds; Santa Cruz played most of the game with a frontline that was not taller than 5-9.

South City roared out of the blocks at the tipoff and ran up a quick 13-4 first-period lead, primarily on fast break baskets.

But Santa Cruz adjusted in the second quarter and got within two of South City by halftime. Realizing the middle would be controlled by SSF's Rickman and strong rebounding forward Jeri Kalvig, Santa Cruz disdained most attempts to penetrate the key and got hot with outside shots.

The Region IV champions created holes in South City's 2-1-2 zone by playing three people at the top of the key and working on the Warrior guards, Beth Damonte and Robin Petrini, who patrol this area. With three on two, someone always got free, and more often than not it was Santa Cruz's Michele Hoga, who canned 17 points.

Even without the free throw troubles South City still had a chance to win the game in regulation. With SSF up by one point and 29 seconds left in the game, the Warriors were working on a stall. But Santa Cruz's Evonne Sandas stole the ball, got fouled by Petrini (who fouled her) and with 14 seconds remaining sank a free throw that later resulted in the overtime. SSF went scoreless in the overtime.

Petrini, SSF's deft ballhandler, was named to the all-tournament team.

In the title contest, Peterson struggled past Carden, 39-32.

Hillsinger Wins 'City'

Mark Hillsinger, former South San Francisco High student-golfer, downed medalist John Susko, San Francisco, 4-3, Sunday to win the 61st San Francisco City championship, largest golf tourney in the world.

Hillsinger, 23, who is eyeing a pro career, took the lead midway through the morning round. His best shot was on the 575-yard par-five tenth hole when he cupped a 70-yard sand wedge blast. He then one-putted the 11th for a par and the victory.

Susko complained he couldn't make crucial putts.

REHUAUNE

Rehauine came to me and asked where he could find Pop. I told him to look in the pool hall.

Later, I went up to the pool hall and Pop soon came in, as I knew he would.

"What the hell happened to my house?" Rehauine asked Pop.

"George, I don't know how to tell you this, but I actually saw your house burn up, stick by stick," Pop told Rehauine, as he looked him right in the eye.

That was the last time we saw Rehauine. I guess he moved out of town, saddened by the fact his house had gone up in smoke.

The special coupon (see today's "Bright Lights") may be applied to the purchase of one dollar or more. Redeemed after 4 p.m. only, Monday through Friday.

"St. Patty's Day the Irish Way" is the cry of RON SANTERO and TOM MORONEY, owners of DOOLEY'S in Foster City. The shenanigans start at 11 a.m. and include "Irish" bagpipes, corned beef hors d'oeuvres all day, and live music and dancing from 9 p.m. The word is spreading quickly about the new sit-down dinners which have replaced the evening buffet in Henri's Room at the Top of the SAN FRANCISCO HILTON TOWER.

Rational Manner Gets Best Results

Gripes of Car Buyers

By JANET PARKER
The pain in your new $8,500 sports car is chipping off in chunks. The dealer hands you a bottle of touch-up paint.

The used car you bought a few weeks back for transportation to work is spending more time in the repair shop than it is on the road.

One mechanical problem after another leads you to believe the car you bought with 3,000 miles on its odometer really has 130,000 miles.

The annoying and sometimes costly problems that accompany automobile ownership have provided lexicographers with a new definition for the lemon.

In a movement of consumer awareness across the country, the auto dealer — both of used and new cars — has become a major target.

The Department of Motor Vehicles received 13,000 complaints last year about cars that were purchased from the 11,000 dealers in the state.

An automobile is usually the second biggest purchase in an individual's lifetime, after a house, says DMV Supervising Special Investigator Roy Hanson.

Hanson is in charge of the 14 investigators of complaints from San Francisco to the north tip of Santa Clara County.

"It's a very emotional deal," Hanson said. "People buy cars for all kinds of feelings — freedom, a status symbol, security — whatever makes them happy."

The auto dealers are part of a very visible and highly competitive industry, Hanson said.

"There's a lot of pressure on them to sell a lot of cars," Hanson said. "While most dealers are honest businessmen, there are some who are unscrupulous and those are the ones we have concentrated on."

In San Mateo County, the Better Business Bureau last year received 176 complaints about automobile dealers and mechanics.

In fact, said General Manager Terry St. Charles, his office receives more complaints concerning auto dealers — both new and used — than any other type of business. Nationally, automobile dealers are second only to mail order companies in the BBB's complaint files.

Of the 176 complaints here last year, 113 were settled to the satisfaction of both parties, St. Charles said. Seven were referred to legal agencies for civil or criminal action. The most common of the complaints involved verbal misrepresentation, he said. A dealer will claim a car is in tip-top shape after a recent overhaul but the engine falls apart when the unknowing buyer drives away.

But in most cases, St. Charles said, both parties are satisfied with the outcome.

St. Charles recalled one case in which a customer bought a used demonstration car, later learning it had been rolled in an accident and repainted. The buyer contacted the BBB and a refund was requested. St. Charles said the dealer not only refunded the purchase, but returned to the lot that bought the customer's trade-in, bought it back and returned it to the customer, too.

"The gentleman was so impressed, he went back and bought a new car from that same dealer," St. Charles said.

In another case, a dealer sold a car with apparently faulty brakes. Three days after the purchase, the owner's son collided into another car when his brakes failed to hold at an intersection. The dealer repainted and repaired the car and replaced the brakes at no charge. The customer, he said, was satisfied.

Consumer Action Now (CAN) of Millbrae takes a more militant approach to consumer auto problems.

First, the CAN staff writes a letter to the dealer, allowing a certain number of days for a response. If there is no answer or the answer doesn't satisfy the consumer — CAN sends a delegation to meet with the management.

A last resort, according to CAN member Cecilia Leone, is to set up informational picket lines in front of the store.

Gerda Huwe of Pacifica says her automobile turned her life upside down for more than a year.

She brought her car back from Europe and from the first day there were mechanical problems. The local dealer had the car for weeks at a time, she said.

ROTARY CLUB SPEAKERS

Rotarian Wally Krivoy makes a presentation to two recent speakers at the Rotary Club of Daly City: Jerry Hertes of the Daly City naval recruiting station (center), and Chief Petty Officer Jim Cappelle of the station in San Mateo (right). A film was shown on the tremendous technical advances in navy ships, planes and armaments since World War II. Cappelle spoke of the high selectivity needed for the men and women recruited.

Cars

days, Mrs. Huwe received a call from the dealer, who told her a check was awaiting her arrival.

It was believed to be the first time in the country than an auto dealer had given a consumer a full refund.

"I found that people power and really putting the pressure on help," Mrs. Huwe said. "There's a big amount of money involved."

"If you have a problem with a car, no matter how small, they try and push it off and push it off. I get the feeling they are really waiting for the consumer to give up," she said.

Valerie Methner of Daly City had her used car four days, then everything seemed to go wrong with it. She was told by a mechanic it needed $400 worth of work and she didn't think that was fair.

However, when she pulled out her sales contract, she saw in clear letters above her name, "sold as is." That, she protested, wasn't there before her signature was.

Letters were written to the manufacturer to no avail. When the dealer finally was warned that picket lines were about to converge he refunded the entire down payment, about $367, and cancelled the deal.

Often the salesman is friendly and amiable before the purchase. After the purchase, he'll turn his head and look the other way then the customer walks in the door with a complaint, she said.

"We've had several instances where we say, 'Can't you as a merchant — put more clout on the manufacturer?'" she explained. "They don't want to take the trouble to make the phone calls. They want the customer to do it."

"When you buy a car, you don't buy it from the manufacturer," she said. "You buy it from the dealer. When you go into Emporium and buy an article and you're not happy with it, you don't take it back to the manufacturer, you take it back to the store you bought it from."

"We're saying if the manufacturer is at fault, then why does the dealer sell that product?" she said.

Auto dealers, however, say they are often caught in the middle of what really is a grievance between a consumer and a manufacturer. They say dealers have too big an investment in their company to ruin their reputation and risk losing their selling license over a simple consumer complaint.

"A lot of consumer groups definitely go overboard," said Ted Davis, manager of the Peninsula Auto Dealers Association (PADA). The organization has 30 members from Daly City to Mountain View, all new car dealers. The Burlingame attorney said many of the campaigns by other consumer pressure groups are matters that could have been handled simply in small claims court. The ceiling on small claims disputes recently increased to $750, enough to cover the cost of most mechanical work. Yet, in South San Francisco Municipal Court, files show such cases are infrequent.

Both the consumer and dealer, she said, have a responsibility to abide by the contract.

"The consumer should exercise a little caution with the car before he buys it," Davis said. "Once he's bought it, he's made an agreement. He can't expect the dealer to give him his money back, just like that after the car has been driven for any length of time."

Most dealers who know the history of a car are not going to intentionally sell a lemon, Davis said.

"It's a self-defeating for them to not do their utmost to please every customer," Davis said.

Bill Wilson, a San Bruno car dealer, is one of several speakers in the PADA's speaker's bureau.

Wilson explained that it isn't a simple process for a dealer to take back a car as if it were a dress that didn't fit.

For one thing, he said, someone has to pay the state and federal sales taxes on that automobile. And, secondly, the value of that car — especially if it was new when it was purchased — has depreciated. The dealer would own a used car and suffer an additional loss.

"Some people are completely unreasonable," Wilson said. "Then, it's virtually impossible to solve their problems."

It's not as hard to get through to a manufacturer as some consumers contend, he said. Many auto manufacturers have a direct line to consumers affairs management. For example, American Motors has a toll-free number, 800-521-7500, for handling warranty complaints.

"Some dealers are caught between the manufacturer and the consumer," Steven Snow said. The dealer's only source of reimbursement is the manufacturer and often the company managers say it's not their problem, he said.

Snow is the executive vice president of the 900-member Northern California Motor Car Dealers Association (Nor-Cal).

He said it's usually the dealer who suffers public ridicule and embarrassment. He pointed out the plight of a Pacifica dealer. More than a year after the warranty had expired, the owner of a truck complained that his fender had rusted. A consumer group, he said, confronted the dealer, who tried in vain to get some help from the manufacturer. Finally, the dealer was forced to put up with weekend picket lines.

"Dealers tend to sympathize with the realities," Snow said. "The car is a necessity. It's an important piece of property. They realize the consumer can't survive without it." In most cases, Snow said, the dealer is working with the consumer — not against him.

John Carpenter, president of Nor-Cal, says legislation is not the way to alleviate consumer-dealer conflicts.

Carpenter, vice president of a Burlingame dealership, says much of the legislation proposed to give the buyer of an auto more rights is an overreaction to a problem.

An oversensitive legislature and government bureaus try to undo some isolated wrongs by sweeping legislation and they end up injuring consumers as a whole," he said.

For example, the state legislature is considering a law that will allow a consumer to try a new car for five days and return it if he doesn't like it.

In the long run, he said, only a few consumers will take advantage of such provisions and that will just add more and more to the retail buyer's price.

The unscrupulous dealer, who has a history of fraud, should be investigated and penalized severely," Carpenter said. "But, sweeping and often times parallel and conflicting legislation by bureaus and legislators will harm the industry, harm the dealer, harm the ultimate consumer and weaken the structure of the law."

Too many automobile shoppers don't do their homework, Hanson said. His advice to consumers in the auto market is:

• Never be in a hurry.

• Check out all the literature — consumer reports, periodicals, journals — and ask the Better Business Bureau about a dealership's reliability.

• Never fall in love with a car because of an advertisement. Pick out a group of cars that look appealing and test drive them all.

• Take along a friend who is knowledgeable about automobiles.

• Don't rely on verbal promises of a dealer. If the dealer won't put his promise in writing, leave.

• Don't sign anything until you completely understand it.

St. Charles said too much misinformation about laws and rights is passed on to consumers.

For example, he said, some consumers are led to believe that a car can be returned in 72 hours if it doesn't meet expectations. That, he said, is a law that applied only to products bought from unsolicited salespersons at your home.

Consumers who confront dealers in a rational manner get the best results, he said he has found.

"I really feel if the consuming public would approach the business in the right manner, they would get what they want," he said.

Suspect Held In DC Slaying

By FRANK LAPIERRE

Jerry Ray Wade, 28, victim of an execution-type slaying in his Daly City home Wednesday night, is believed to have been tortured for an hour before being shot to death.

Police would not confirm or deny reports that Wade's body bore small puncture

Later Story, Page One

The Times learned that Wade's brother, James E. Wade, was also shot to death — execution style — in an Oakland apartment on Nov. 5, 1975.

Oakland Homicide Division Lt. Bill Clark said James Wade was shot along with another man and the case is still open.

The recent killing is believed to have been carried out by three men.

One man, Ernest Townes, 27, of 40 Cashmere St., San Francisco, a counselor in Mayor George Moscone's youth program, has already been arrested and charged with one count of murder, two counts of assault with intent to commit murder, armed robbery and conspiracy.

It was further learned that police are now conducting a statewide search for two other men seen leaving the area of Wade's apartment, 80 Forest Grove shortly after the shootings occurred.

Two others were tied hand and foot and shot once in the head by a .38-caliber handgun along with Wade, police said.

Barbara Ann Dickson, 30, the slain victim's girlfriend, remains in critical condition today at Mary's Help Hospital, following surgery.

Miss Dickson's cousin,

David D. Twine, 29, of San Francisco, was treated and released following the shooting, police disclosed today.

Twine happened by the apartment and was dragged inside by the invaders, it was learned.

He was also bound and shot once in the head. The bullet entered Twine's head under the hairline and exited on the other side without penetrating the skull, according to a police department spokesman.

The department withheld Twine's escape from death because they feared the killer or killers might again attack the victim, police said.

Townes was arrested without incident near his home Thursday by Daly City detectives and San Francisco police.

Transfer Site

Permit Approved

The Daly City Planning Commission has approved a use permit for a garbage transfer station at Mussel Rock dump, also the proposed site of a community oceanside park.

With this action, the commission set in motion procedure for bringing the issue before the City Council.

There was little opposition to the location of the transfer station at the Tuesday session.

An Environmental Impact

Report (EIR) prepared by the city planning staff stated that the station would be situated in the midst of a public park and could generate traffic increase noise levels, and perhaps emit some odors resulting from the transfer of garbage from smaller trucks to larger vehicles used to transport garbage to the Ox Mountain dump.

The transfer station would serve both Pacifica and Daly City, under a proposed joint agreement.
